I hate you, but I'm impressed . . . I know what you're thinking: "Joan, hate is a very strong word." You're right, it is, but I use it as an umbrella term, the way mental-health professionals use the word schizophrenia as a catchall for any particular brand of crazy they can't identify. So when I say hate, I don't necessarily mean ...

There comes a phase in everyone's life when they start to hate everyone. It is generally when many people you loved or trusted, did awful things to you. Maybe they betrayed you or became indifferent all of a sudden. Other times, while you were willing to make every sacrifice for them, they turned out to be selfish and simply, "used" you.

How to Stop Hating Everyone (with Pictures)

If you are hating the people around you, it is so because you are filled with hatred within. All hatred starts from inside and you first hate yourself before you start hating other people. A person who hates the world is a person who actually hates himself, often without being aware of it. This happens due to several reasons like.

What to Do When You Ask: Why Do I Hate Everyone? - Learn ...

I listened to I Hate Everyone as an audiobook in the car on the way to work, and got a few laughs out of it. The shtick gets old quickly, but when it works, it works. The books doesn't do anything to reveal Rivers as a human being, though (unlike the documentary film), so when the laughs get thin, there's not anything else to fall back on.
