Problems are solved under Lorentztransformationsoflength,time,velocity,momentumandenergy,theinvari-ance of four-momentum vector, transformation of angles and Doppler effect and threshold of particle production. Chapters 7 and 8 are concerned with problems in low energy Nuclear physics.

1000 Solved Problems in Modern Physics

Of all the major advances in physics from about 1900 onwards special relativity is the only one that can be reasonably well understood in its entirety without recourse to mathematics beyond that of high school level. However, just as with all physics, special relativity has at its base a precise set of mathematical formulas from which predictions can be made and tested against experimental ...
